

EARS FOR CIVIL ENGINES

The debut release for Jazzhead, Ears For Civil Engines is a collection of 13 original tunes by Australian jazz luminaries and features some outstanding individual and ensemble playing.

This set has everything: cutting edge modern jazz, cool jazz, bebop, swinging blues and piano based mood pieces. It's a saxophone love-fest on Rob Burke's Brotherhood with Burke on tenor, and Julien Wilson and the scorching Ian Chaplin on alto saxophones.

Pianist Sam Keevers provides two fine self-penned trio tunes, as does fellow pianist Tim Stevens on the stark title track and the coldly beautiful Meaning In Sights Unseen, both featuring the excellent rhythm section of Nick Haywood (bass) and Allan Browne (drums).

Paul Grabowsky does the piano duties on a tune by trumpeter Scott Tinkler, and Tim Neal weighs in with some pithy Hammond Organ on Julien Wilson's Törsten.

An illustration of just how good Australian jazz talent is - great songs and great blowin'.

The third release from Jazzhead was originally released on 13 June 1997. Nominated for an ARIA (Australian Recording Industry Association) Award later that year, the stunning Javabubbaboogaloo deserved eight out of ten for its title alone.

Ian Chaplin, James Sherlock, Rob Burke, Paul Williamson. Javabubbaboogaloo features some of the best of the Melbourne scene's hottest players in a mix-and-match line up that keeps your fingers snapping and your toes tapping with jazz grooves.

Freedom Jazz Dance, penned by the late great Eddie Harris, has a Miles muted trumpet sounding over a beat that takes on a fresh feeling, with Rob Burke pushing that horn way out. Paul Williamson shows a touch of the late Junior Walker on Zamisdat. James Sherlock and Ian Chaplin are right on the money on Decoy's Listen Here, and Tim Neal's A Message For You has a fabulous melodic feeling.

Like its predecessor Ears For Civil Engines, Javabubbaboogaloo percolates and bubbles so much you can't help but move. Enjoy!
